'Kotong' on the streets

THE STORY seems depressingly familiar: Motorist is flagged down by cops and threatened with jail time for an alleged offense, when a certain amount of cash is handed over, these many ordinary citizens have been victorious. But not by politicians and public lawyers doubling as professional extortionists? What then? Many simply comply out of fear for their lives and safety, and don't bother to report the highway robbery.

EDITORIAL But, in the latest case to hit the headlines, two cops had the extreme bad luck of harassing a 22-year-old man who turned out to have the best secret weapon possible in cases like this: his father is the policeman's boss.

It was probably still a day's work for SP4 Jose de la Rosa and PJO Remy del Rosario of the Quezon City Police District Mobile Patrol Unit when they accosted the young driver who had pulled him off during a Quezon City street and neighborhood cleanup on his mobile phone. The cops accosted the driver of engaging in phone use, told him loudly that it was a serious crime, and demanded P20,000 to hush up the case. The frightened driver said he didn't have that kind of money, so the amount was progressively decreased until the cops settled for P5,000. De la Rosa then took over the wheel to drive the young man to an ATM where he could withdraw the money. When the driver asked the cops to call his father for help, and that's when the extortion attempt unraveled.

"My dad's voice was cracking," Chief Supt. Leonardo Lopez, the new director of the National Capital Police Region Office, later said in revealing the incident. "I really got worried because he was almost crying when he told me what just happened to him. So I immediately told him to get the policeman who arrested him on the phone... [The policeman] asked me what I was. So I told him, 'This is General Lopez. He's suddenly hung up.'"

The scene seemed straight out of a bad movie. According to Lopez's son, the two cops immediately killed off hearing his father's name on the phone. (One hysterical laughter here.)

The cops' cops are now facing administrative charges. Del Rosario refused to say that the extortion was De la Rosa's idea, and he was not just "following orders" from his superior. De la Rosa, accompanied by two lawyers, showed up at the OJC's only last Monday.

"We will do everything to go only these [kinda of policeman]," said a kudos jargon. "We don't want them to stay in the Philippine National Police."

Lopez had a tough job ahead. We've heard those words before from a long line of PNP heads insistently protesting to those up the Agency ladder that the country's law enforcement force has become, first, every day, for "kotong" cop only appear to give to mobilize criminal record and school of impunity. Despite's new to kick out the best of his own corruption, for instance, is quickly deflected by subsequent news that De la Rosa himself has never administrative cases in his record—two of them for similar charges of extortion.

At various times, this classic widening in uniform was also accused of demanding and taking a bribe and being "arrogant, bullying and rude," all acts qualifying as grave misconduct. Three of his cases had been referred for summary dismissal proceedings, but wonder if wonder, for he is still in the ranks. For the fresh denials of his latest victim's powerful family connection. Usually, if a corruptly or dishonestly—having the long-running criminal enterprise wide open, De la Rosa would disappear all the way to the streets, leaving crime as the strength of his police badge.

According to PNP records, most abusive cops used to come from the ranks of rookies and junior law enforcers. That means something is seriously wrong with the training these new recruits are getting all well as the Commission on Human Rights is now looking into the academy because many of them flunked all or too soon on cases of rape, robbery, extortion, bribery, sedition, illegal arrest, malversation, and even removal of weapons—the usual catalogue of police crimes. And once those young policemen get away with it the first few times, they're obviously well on their way to becoming the legendary kating cop.

The Agency administration has seen a measure of success in its campaign against that typical of extortion on the street, the "strong sense." Formerly similar credits to be done, arguably, against corrupt police officers and dysfunction of PNP systems. Despite has had dozens held police for Quezon City cops. We will hold him to his word. After all, very few of an have a police general for a father.

NCRPO chief's tip to bulging men: Go easy on the rice

By John M. Aurelio

These were among the bits of advice dispensed yesterday by newly appointed National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO) director Chief Supt. Leonardo Espina during a visit to the Quezon City Police Station. Headquarters (QCHQ) as he went around the different Metro police districts.

Esquina, who like Philippine National Police chief Director General Romeo Baraibar, sports a trim physique, urged policemen with pot bellies to get themselves into shape so that they would be able to meet their uniform with pride. "It's up to you to keep your body in shape," he said.

"Take care of your bodies. What if you have to run? How can you run if you're fat? If you're fat, you're not a police officer," he said. "If you're fat, you're not a police officer." He said that policemen should not only be proud to wear their uniforms, they should also look inside it carefully. "The 'Taps' B' uniform which refers to a white shirt, over blue pants is unacceptable," Espina stressed.

"Even for my rank you giving media interviews wearing civilian wear is not the 'Taps' B' uniform," he said. "You're not a police officer."

According to Espina, the PNP uniform is a symbol of authority and reflects one's self discipline. "Even for my rank you giving media interviews wearing civilian wear is not the 'Taps' B' uniform," he said. "You're not a police officer."

But more importantly policemen should also be disciplined and practice courtesy even when making no arrest.

"You're not a police officer," he said. "You're not a police officer." He said that policemen

His visit came days after his co-commander a Quezon City policeman arrested him for taking and pocketing money from him.

MPD cop in torture video loses CA plea

THE COURT of Appeals has dismissed a petition of a Manila policeman who questioned a local court for proceeding with trial of an charges that he and some fellow officers tortured a crime suspect inside their precinct.

The alleged acts of torture were recorded in a video that went viral in March 2010.

In a decision dated Aug. 24, the 12th Intermediate Appellate Division (IAD) dismissed the petition.

The Manila RTC also denied the policeman's motion for reconsideration of the decision.

It later claimed that the local court committed gross abuse of discretion in proceeding to trial without sufficient evidence for finding the policemen liable for torturing a suspect in their precinct.

The CA decision passed by Associate Justice Ang Lakan-Lamban and the policeman's petition was "totally devoid of merit."

It also said that the policeman did not meet minimum standards of the record for it to determine the facts and circumstances of the case.

Marker to rise in honor of 'killer highway' victims

By Jameson O. Ambrose

A memorial to honor the people who perished on the so-called "killer highway" and their role in opening the Quezon City government and the University of the Philippines (UP) into making road safety a priority will soon take form at the spot where multi-lane road was inaugurated by President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo last year.

The installation of the marker was approved in a resolution passed on March 2012 and last meeting by Quezon City councilors during a regular session the other day.

It was first proposed at May 2011 after Ambrose said when he reported the rising in traffic for a quarter mile near the UP Manila Extension on Commonwealth Avenue.

According to its proponents, Councilor Xsido Lito Legaspi, the marker would serve as a constant reminder to drivers by the local government and officials to be more careful when driving on the highway.

There is a need to honor the innocent lives who were lost along Commonwealth Avenue, Quezon City through a marker signifying the city's willingness to ensure the safety of its citizens and the general riding public. — a portion of the resolution.

Based on figures collected by the city government, the Department of Public Order and Safety and the Quezon City Police Department's Traffic Enforcement Unit, there were no deaths reported from the 216 official accidents that occurred on Commonwealth Avenue from January to August the year following those taken by the Metropolitan Manila Development Authority and the city government to make the major thoroughfare safe.

China sends ships to Japan-held islands

Dispute flares up in East China Sea

BEIJING—A territorial flareup between China and Japan intensified on Tuesday as two Beijing-based patrol ships arrived near disputed East China Sea islands in a show of anger over Tokyo's purchase of the largely barren outcroppings from their private owners.

The China Marine Surveillance has drafted up a plan to intensify China's sovereignty of the islands and the ships were sent to assert these claims, said the Chinese government's official news agency Xinhua. The maritime rights is a perennial issue between the two nations.

The rocky islands, known as Senkaku to Japanese and Diaoyu to Chinese, have been the focus of mounting tensions between the countries and are also claimed by Taiwan. The China-Japan dispute has been heating up in recent months, in part because the Japanese government of Tokyo had proposed buying the islands and developing them.

Japan's recent government announced its own deal this week with the Japanese firm to acquire the islands, a move that has triggered a strong reaction in the mainland. China's Foreign Ministry has also expressed its opposition to the move.

Public broadcaster CCTV said the government and the firm signed a preliminary agreement to develop the islands. Several reports suggested the move as an attempt to block the plan by Tokyo. Gov. Chen Shui-bian, who could have called national elections, said he had no intention to sell the islands.

A PROTESTER shouts anti-Japanese slogans in eastern China's Shandong province during a demonstration protesting Japan's purchase of rocky islands in the East China Sea. The islands, known as Senkaku to Japanese and Diaoyu to Chinese, are claimed by China, Japan and Taiwan.

China is an effort to its claims and to gain more sovereignty.

'Up the stakes'
Cape Town, an expert on regional security at the University of New South Wales in Australia, said China's sending of the patrol ships is a "clear message" to Japan.

By flying, however, expressed with by Premier Wen Jiabao's visit to Japan, said that China would send back off its claims.

China's foreign ministry said on Monday in a statement, "Japan's intention to go to the next step is well known to all the serious observers of the world."

About a dozen protesters gathered outside the Japanese Embassy in Beijing, chanting "Japan, get out of China!" and "We don't want the islands!"

Japan's foreign ministry also lodged a strong protest in Japan, in a statement, it called the island purchase an "extremely unfriendly move" that "not only harms the long-term cooperation between China and Japan but will also aggravate regional tensions."

China is East Asia.

War's affect ties
Top Japanese government officials estimate that the Senkaku Islands affected official ties with China, although Deputy Prime Minister Katsuya Okada acknowledged that tensions on both sides were being eased by activists.

Prime Minister Naoto Kan said not only Senkaku but also the islands of the East China Sea, which are the focus of the dispute from a broad perspective. Kan said that the "China's growth is a chance for the world and we would like to develop it as a strategic partner."

Disputed Islands
The map shows the location of the Senkaku Islands in the East China Sea, which are claimed by China, Japan, and Taiwan.

The Senkaku Islands are a group of islands in the East China Sea. They are claimed by China, Japan, and Taiwan. The islands are located about 100 kilometers from the Chinese coast and about 200 kilometers from the Japanese coast.

Jolie hears heartbreaking tales from Syrian refugees

JANNEY, Jordan—Her eyes welling up with tears, actress Angelina Jolie said on Tuesday the "heart-breaking" and "heart-breaking" accounts from Syrian refugees who fled the civil war in their country to find refuge in a camp just across the border in Jordan.

The Hollywood star and UN refugee agency's special envoy said she and the United Nations, which have about 30,000 Syrian refugees in the 18-month conflict that has so far claimed at least 21,000 lives, according to estimates.

"I am very interested, the world is very concerned," Jolie said during her high-profile visit aimed at focusing international attention on the plight of Syrian refugees and attracting more funding to help them. "What is very heartbreaking is when Syrian people ask me why you think we are not able to find a solution for them."

"After they described to me the ground, hearing it from their own mouths," Jolie said, adding that the children's stories were especially moving. "When you meet so many innocent people and children, the people of Syria are asking you to do something. Why is going to help them to the middle of the war?"

The actress also said some of the refugees expressed how "there will be no return of us" left in Syria as the violence has become too dangerous.

refugee women and moved the sprawling camp in the company of UN refugee chief Antonio Guterres and Jordanian Foreign Minister Nasser Bader.

"The situation that we are facing here is a very dramatic one because we are the international community to respond to a crisis that is so serious and so many people are suffering."

The UNHCR is a global organization that is working to help refugees and displaced people.

Jordan opened up the Zaatari facility for Syrians in July after they had been a desert since October to set up a refugee camp, providing them with shelter and food.

Jolie was also to visit Syrian refugees in Lebanon, Turkey and Iraq during the next of her trip to the region.

Peso at four-year high

By Michelle K. Barro

MACTAN, CEBU—As the peso strengthened to its highest in four years, the central bank yesterday warned against currency speculation and reminded banks about the non-eligibility of money from foreign clients in the special deposit account (SDA) facility.

The Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas said it wanted banks to put up a system that would detect sources of funds being invested in the SDA facility. Specifically, the BSP wanted banks to have a system to grow to regulatory that the funds being invested in SDA were not money coming from bank foreign clients.

Last July, the BSP announced that it was prohibiting foreign funds from being invested in the central bank's SDA facility a virtually risk-free investment vehicle that serves about a percent of assets of all banks.

The prohibition was aimed at curbing speculative activities involving the peso-dollar exchange rate. Regulators believed that because of speculation that the peso would further appreciate over the next year,

Exports growth improves to 7.8% in July

By Ana C. Iba

MANILA—Exports grew at a faster pace in July after a downturn in the previous month but shipments of electronics, the country's top export, continued to drag down the sluggish global economy.

Outbound shipments increased by 7.8 percent in July from a year earlier as huge increases in exports from the most consumption and industrial nations offset a sharp decline in electronics and semi-conductors.

The better performance of some other than electronics might not be enough to meet the export target as the country's year-to-date trading surplus has evaporated.

OWNERSHIP STARTS AT P499,000 / MONTH

Amid urban bustle, a serene sanctuary

By Charles E. Rubin

It can easily be said that Quezon City, the country's former capital, is one of the busiest and most vibrant cities today. It is home to big universities and colleges, the largest shopping malls and business establishments, and well-known industrial hubs. Quezon Avenue, in the northern part of Quezon City, is definitely no exception as it is a major thoroughfare that connects to EDSA and to Marikina Avenue (which now has a direct access to the North Luzon Expressway) as well as the Fajes Road Avenue) and is surrounded by embassies and shopping establishments.

With all these activities brewing, it may seem that there can be no space for vibrant dwellers in this part of the metropolis. But through its recent premier condominium development, Suntrust Properties, Inc., a subsidiary of property giant Mayapacdo Corporation, is going to make possible a peaceful and convenient lifestyle very different from Quezon City's usual whirlwind mode of living.

And as its name suggests, Shanata—where it is a Suntrust and the tranquility, serenity and quietness—a beautiful offer is a good reason. Since most people enter open to find relaxation or distraction from the pressures and stresses of daily life, we decided Shanata should also provide a proper refuge for its residents," described Suntrust Properties president Alvin Hernandez III, Palagonan.

Palagonan showed that within its gates, Shanata promises to make its residents feel that they have completely left the noise and tempo of the outside world, or at least in shedding off their work clothes.

Blocking out traffic noise

"Suntrust Properties promises that from the moment the residents pass through Shanata's cascading waterfalls at the entrance gate, they will feel like they have entered a different world. They will be greeted by a splendid avenue of trees leading to a central promenade that cuts through the landscaped slopes of the land. Moreover, privacy and tranquility are ensured as the community is designed to minimize the outside urban view or noise in the traffic lane. This way, homeowners are can focus their attention to the lush tropical foliage and the modern Asian-inspired buildings before them," described Palagonan.

Suntrust Properties has decided to devote 30 percent of Shanata's 3.34-hectare lot area to the cultivation of trees and lush greenery. The amenities zone will also feature a small outdoor area also been positioned away from the main road to further lessen the impact of the noise and pollution.

Suntrust Properties is composed of 77 clusters with Suntrust-inspired names—Aldora (gentleness), Araya (delicate grace), Daria (wisdom), Dharma (daughter of the earth), Brando (benevolent life), Rukma (beauty), Lora (line of sight), Lucio (peace), Nara (loyalty), Nika (beauty), Saba (peace) and Sereya (wealth). The project offers a total of 1,757 units.

"The advantage of having a low-density residential community like Shanata is that there will be no crowding in the amenities, along corridors and other common areas. The sense of community in this area, privacy and security are ensured," continued Palagonan.

The cluster zone also of varying heights ranging from six, eight, ten to twelve stories. This play of heights gives additional emphasis on the Mountain Avenue design of the project and lends an additional homey character. This also allows for the penetration of natural light and air circulation.

Proved design

Even after successfully completing numerous high-profile subdivisions and five national residential communities, Palagonan is especially proud of Shanata because this would define Suntrust's image in the virtual market as a distinctive Modern Asian concept. He said the modern Asian touch is a perfect design idea for a project like Shanata. "Mountain Avenue combines the old and the new. Benevolent of the better today, we'll still offer to buyers an old on large windows that provide that cozy feeling and lots of natural light into all areas of the house. Ventilation is excellent thanks to the modern layout. And with modern materials like concrete and steel, our residents will be assured of a home that lasts for decades," he explained.

Shanata offers studio units with a total floor area of 26-7 square meters, including a 3.3-square-meter balcony. Also available are 3-bedroom units with 38 square meters floor area, and

PLDT network 'unrivaled'

Exec cites coverage, capacity, resiliency

By Paul G. Macarillo

MANILA (PNA) — Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. (PLDT) and most of its subscribers now enjoy the improved coverage, service quality and network resiliency following the early completion of the company's network modernization program this year.

In a statement issued yesterday, PLDT said the modernized networks of its mobile brands Smart Communications and Sun Cellular were now un-rivaled by any other telecommunications player in the country.

The company, chaired by Manuel E. Pangloss, was leading its client Globe Telecom, which is under scrutiny by government regulators due to a spike in complaints regarding the reliability of its services.

"This group's investments have produced a network that is unrivaled in terms of coverage, capacity and resiliency," PLDT president and CEO Napoleon L. Manzano said. "What was already the best network and advanced network in the country has been further steps along with our access network providing the widest coverage via the expansion of long-term evolution (LTE) sites and urban hot networks that relies on over 40,000 kilometers of fiber assets with an additional 4,000 kilometers of fiber to the home rollout."

This brings the PLDT group's total fiber assets to 14,000 kilometers, more than four times the 3,500 kilometers of fiber network being built by Globe.

"We are close to covering the whole of Metro Manila with the more reliable and faster fiber backbone and getting momentum in extending the same fiber coverage," Pangloss said.

He added that the PLDT group, through reliable subsidiaries Smart Communications and Sun Cellular, has established an access network that stretched with 3G and LTE technologies, with 90 coverage reaching majority of the population and LTE existing in growing number of areas.

No other provider comes close to the network that we have seen, not just in terms of capacity but also in particularly in terms of reliability and resiliency," Manzano said. "We are now in the best position to meet the demands of the future. We are actively prepared for the challenges."

The National Telecommunications Commission (NTC) earlier this month said it had alerted Globe Telecom, owned by Ayala Corp. and the Singtel group, about a spike in complaints of dropped calls, delayed messages and inconsistent Internet services.

The NTC and Globe earlier admitted that the problems were caused by the company's network upgrades, but the telecommunications firm was quick to deny the claims.

Globe had said that its network problems stemmed from the completion of its old legacy network, which is being replaced as part of the firm's 47th birthday celebration program that is scheduled for completion early next year.

Anti-corruption drive in private sector gains traction

By Rita T. Decker

BY 2014, business groups and individual companies under the Integrity Initiative led by the Manila Business Club and the European Chamber of Commerce of the Philippines (ECCP) may do business only with firms that follow the same ethical code of conduct.

Edgardo Francisco, president of the Management Association of the Philippines and ex-vice chair of the Integrity Initiative, said the goal was that eventually members would only do business with other companies that follow the unified code of conduct.

To fit, about 1,200 companies have signed up under the initiative.

For there is "a long way to go" with about 700,000 companies registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Manuel Velasco, past president of the ECCP and ex-vice chair of the Integrity Initiative.

"Clean business is good business," Velasco said in a briefing announcing the upcoming Integrity Initiative Week in Sept. 17-21.

The companies called on companies supporting the national anti-corruption drive through the so-called Integrity Initiative to do business with fellow companies in order to encourage more companies to join the drive in any form.

Velasco said the aim was that by 2014, Integrity Initiative would implement a certification standard and provide compliance mechanisms "a tool" that would give firms power to be business dealings with fellow member companies.

The standard is meant to harmonize existing ethical standards used by signatories companies. Presently, Integrity Initiative members sign the Integrity Pledge to show fidelity to any firm, implement internal systems that will prevent any unethical conduct within their firms and maintain a code of conduct for employees or contractual business partners.

Signatories also pledge to maintain transparency and appropriate environment and financial reporting mechanisms as well as allow themselves to be subjected to audits if needed.

The Integrity Initiative also aims to give government agencies in country to accept only bids coming from Integrity-certified companies. This will encourage more companies to sign the Integrity Pledge.

Vehicle sales grew 6% as of Aug., says Campi

Units sold hit 98,725 from 93,108 in '11

By Rex T. Chibande

ROVER sales in the first eight months of the year improved on the back of an upbeat economy despite a slight decline in August caused by weather disruptions, according to the Chamber of Automotive Manufacturers of the Philippines (Campi).

Campi data show that vehicle sales as of August increased by 6 percent to 98,725 from the 93,108 sold in the same period last year.

"The strong growth can be attributed to the influx of new model introductions by the year and the country's positive economic outlook, which has resulted in the increase in purchasing power of the Filipino," Campi said in a report.

In terms of brand performance as of August 2012, Toyota Motor Philippines continues to lead the industry with a 30.9 percent share of the market, followed by Mitsubishi's 20.4 percent and Honda with 13.3 percent.

By the month of August alone, Campi members registered total industry sales of 11,261 units, a 1 percent dip from the 11,503 units sold in the same month last year.

Campi attributed the slight decline in the strong increase in retail but caused partly flooding throughout the Manila. This was also caused by fewer working days on top of the national holidays declared during the month.

PSALM places more assets on auction block

By Amy R. Riano

STATE-OWNED POWER SOURCE Assets and Capitalism Management Corp. plans to list on starting November this year some government-owned contracted capacities as part of its asset management strategy.

PSALM president, Samuel R. Linares, A told reporters yesterday that PSALM plans to place on the auction block the independent power producer subsidiaries (IPPs) owned by the following-owned United Laysan power plant and the 150-MW Cebu power plant.

"We are shifting the structure that will maximize participation of various industry participants," Linares added.

PSALM hopes to raise over the 50% ownership to prospective foreign groups within the first quarter of 2013.

The government agency is working on dividing the contracted capacities of the United Laysan complex in present market conditions by a single firm and to make the facility financially viable.

"We are still working on the United Laysan (IPPs contract) but we are not in a hurry to divide the contracted capacity," Linares said.

At least two or three companies which, in turn, would allow them to bid to participate and allow PSALM to maximize the capacity that may be generated from the plant, Linares said.

Given the large generating capacity of the United Laysan power plant, PSALM said it has three options to be able to manage the plant. It is to sell the IPPs contract without having the so-called asset cap on power generation in the future.

Monsieur, those who say it is hard to acquire the United Laysan without having the cap on power generation, Linares said.

AFTER WARRANTY RUNS OUT

What drives car owners away from their dealers?

By Tina R. Solano

TOYOTA's first brand specialist greeting that morning says "Hi, how are you, sir?" which translates in English as "My house is your house." Filipino car owners certainly find that very warm when they buy a brand-new car from their friendly neighborhood dealership. They feel welcomed. And as long as the warranties are effective, the car owners regularly bring in their cars for routine checkups, tune-ups, tune-ups, and repairs.

But then, after the warranties expire, say after three to five years, a strange thing happens. The visits by the car owners abruptly stop. What gives?

Absolutely, car owners have ideas but delicate relationships with their dealerships. It has always been one where each has had to watch their backs, the general overriding perception being that consumer protection agencies have got all both but not the consumers—and there are the car owners—and no gapping about busy schedules, heated repairs and goodnotes as their cars is online forums. Because these such busy schedules, and whether there is or is not, they can drive some thought and further investigation.

Case in point: First mass developer Ed. Jaramba, 48, has been driving for 30 years and has owned his first share of wealth of various brands. He had established good relationships with two dealers of Japanese brands, and by that he means that he still brings his cars to the same even after their warranties had expired. "They have given me an reason to drive close," he laughs.

But it was not the same with a new Japanese brand he wanted recently. He told the incident involved "a very small issue" that would have been taken for granted, the dead brake light, which was conspicuously absent from his high-end model 2011 pickup. Jaramba explained that the dead brake light should have been standard in his model.

"I thought it was a big deal. I'll stop you in my legitimate sense and get it fixed in 30 minutes. Imagine my surprise, then, when I was informed by my dealer that doing so would cost the equivalent of my car's insurance. So I say, yes, you do it then. And they say, sure—they wanted a price less than half of what the dealer and Japanese OEM market alternatives."

In the end, Jaramba never did get the dead brake light installed in his pickup. When he did get from the dealership was his idea, and a few to drive again by from the manufacturer.

Jaramba isn't alone. His experience is replicated again 75 percent of the time.

Keynote speaker talked to me experts and found out from them that up to 75 percent of car owners didn't return their cars to the dealer after the warranty ran out. In one instance, car manufacturers estimate that only 50 percent of car buyers return to dealers for service after their warranty has run out. Auto expert Mark Ishikawa noted that poor service, high prices, and callous service people are often given as reasons for people leaving their cars with the dealer. Auto.com said they were offered satisfactory repairs.

And then, founder of Tale T. Rydell's Training Center and former marketing head of one of the biggest car companies in the Philippines, said that with the escalation of the cost of car repairs and increasing quality of replacement parts from imports, "The behavior has hardly changed to this day."

This behavior (this is relevant to last year's) happened in a diagram (shown below) showing majority of the car owners didn't return to their car for service after warranty expires.

Units, who used to register after sales service and upon parts operation in his capacity as marketing head, said that most manufacturers nowadays offer a 100,000-km or 5-year warranty (whichever comes first), but because most car owners don't travel within three months (usually) for an average of 20,000 km per year, the 5-year warranty lapses before owners reach the 100,000-km limit.

"From this point on, it would be a serious case document and need to watch about

Porsche banks on sustainability as it expands Leipzig plant

STUTTGART—The expansion of Porsche's Leipzig plant, one of the most efficient automobile factories in the world, could use another clear message for environmental protection.

The plant's designers have taken extensive steps for the protection of the environment, going as far as to install a system of CO<sub>2</sub> treatment, amount of water and consumption of energy. Its duty here has been successful in reducing the overall energy needs of the plant considerably. One of a kind in this sector is the use of a wood chip fired heating system, which will supply the new plant design with energy for its own power. Currently, the Porsche plant of 26.5 sq. km. 3 Porsche AG in Stuttgart is being built for the new Model 911 Carrera, set to replace the existing 911, starting in late 2013.

"Environmental protection is a real demand of Porsche's corporate responsibility. This applies to our production and our customers' cars," says a Porsche AG spokesman. "We are not positioned to meet our social responsibility when it comes to reducing costs, neither by not employing and thus not making a huge contribution to economic growth," said Wolfgang Göttinger, member of the Executive Board Production and Logistics of Porsche AG.

Investment measures for the improvement of the conditions are scheduled to be in place by the completion of the new factory space next year. The state of the newly used chip-fired heating plant will be used to supply 90 percent of the heat for the new plant along with a carbon-neutral heat. A completely innovative separation system for paint used in being built based on an electrolytic method, helping to reduce the environmental impact and has been during the painting process is a milestone. In addition, the waste and parking lot on the new factory premises will be equipped with LED lamps. The roof of the body construction plant is prepared for a photovoltaic plant used for generating electric power. Single, reflecting roof membranes are to prevent the heating up of the building facade in winter.

With the expansion of its Leipzig plant, Porsche is carrying forward its sustainability strategy with new technologies and an efficient energy management system, all stations should reduce, will be considered, some benchmarks defined and when implemented. This also applies to the painting concept established in Leipzig, which is one of a kind in the automotive industry. Since 2006, when the plant was built, the sports car maker had not exposed, without compromise and partners all around the factory built-in order to create sustainable habitats for animals and plants. In the course of the plant expansion, the sports car maker will reduce these green areas, which Porsche and will focus in "Porsche landscapes of the future" will continue to make use of in the future.

Ford to sell Edge, EcoSport in Europe as SUV sales rise

FORD MOTOR Co. showed its revamped European lineup on recently, including a new small sport utility vehicle in challenge Nissan Juke Co's Juke, as the automaker pushes to revive sales and curb mounting losses in the region.

Chief executive Alan Mulally said other Ford executives previewed several models to some 2,000 dealers, including the Edge, a compact SUV launched early this year as the new Juke from Nissan that will compete in one of the five growing vehicle segments in Europe.

The Edge was designed to give to Ford's struggling European dealers that it has a smaller car volume in the pipeline. So far this year, Ford sales have fallen faster than overall demand in Europe, where the automaker expects to lose more than $1 billion this year and to continue to lose more.

"The most important thing we can do is acknowledge the current reality and develop a plan to deal with it," Mulally said at the event held at the Ziggo Dome in Amsterdam.

Through July, Ford sales in Europe have slumped nearly 11 percent, with the overall market down about 7 percent but by the deepening economic crisis, in the second quarter, Ford lost $1.32 billion more vehicle a slumped to Europe.

But sales of SUVs, like the Nissan Juke, have been the star bright spot for the European car industry executives said. Ford is expanding its SUV lineup and aims to sell 1 million SUVs in Europe over the next five years.

But plans to introduce the Edge in the next 18 months and will have a new model of its existing Edge in Europe later this year. Ford also revealed plans to sell the new generation of its midsize-end Edge SUV in Europe.

"Over the past five years, the SUV segment is the only one to have grown in Europe, and it's here to stay," Jim Hales, Ford's global marketing chief, said on Thursday. "Small is where the real growth happens." The small SUV segment in Europe will double in the next five years, he said.

adding that sales of midsize-end SUVs may grow by a third. In addition to the SUV, Ford also showed the updated Fiesta small car, a European market and the Transit commercial van.

Ford also plans to sell the Mustang car in Europe, Mulally said.

Dealers also saw the new flagship Mondeo, based on Ford's US Focus sedan. The car was scheduled to be introduced in Europe in early 2013, but suppliers were told the launch would be pushed back at least six months to Ford could address production capacity issues.

The new US sedan is a compact banger in 2009, Ford recovered strongly from that crisis but has since lost some momentum, with Europe emerging as a challenge.

Ford's sales have been hurt by cut-throat competition from newcomers such as Hyundai Motor Co. and Kia Motors Co., as well as a shift in demand toward premium brands.

"We're fully aware of the profitability situation across the entire network in Europe," said Stephen Odell, Ford's head of Europe.

Even in Germany, where the auto market has in the second quarter, Ford dealers are finding the segment with profit margin close to 1 percent and margins decreasing, said Chris Wren, head of a three-chessman dealership network.

"We're losing it," he said. "We don't know where we're going to be at the end of the year."

But he added that Ford's profit in SUVs is a welcome surprise. In Europe, demand in the category is strong and the supply of trucks and used cars for sale as a "good answer to the Volkswagen Tiguan." As the economy in Europe improves on its own, used and other major segments are also preparing with capacity.

Ford's supply chain network in Europe is 63 percent, lower than the 75 percent rate reported in a report to investors, said Morgan Stanley analyst Adam Jones.

Redefining the Subaru Impreza Challenge

EVERY TIME an automobile undertakes a mission with new street mental and new features, it is redefined. Motor image, the exclusive distributor of Subaru in Asia, introduced new redefinition last Saturday: the all-new, fourth-generation Impreza and the B5 Impreza by qualifier of the Subaru Impreza Challenge. Singapore's and Japan's competition.

It was the first time that the Impreza Challenge (which the latest edition of the Impreza in the same day and the same venue as the challenge, holding two more events in one place) to spirit more space, said Mike Lopez, the newly appointed general manager of Subaru Philippines Inc., as instead of traditional, the venue of the challenge in the previous two years, they show the army unit of Bonifacio High Street in BGC (Bonifacio Global City), Taguig.

The brand new Impreza was parked inside an exclusive brand section of the army unit for the challenge. Lopez, who has been with Subaru Impreza since 2006 to establish it in Manila, said that of the 130 applicants who signed up in July, 24 showed up on the day of the challenge.

Left standing, The Subaru Impreza Challenge requires participants to place their right palm on a specific, marked area of the car starting at 9:30 a.m. up to the time that only 10 are left standing, which is usually at night. The current officially ends at 11 p.m. The top 10 winners will be featured on all aspects from top up to $1000 prize money in Singapore, where they will compete with their qualifications from Asian countries in the Regional Final Off and get the chance to win a brand new Impreza worth P1.14 million.

Why Singapore? Because that's where Subaru Impreza has been headquartered since its establishment in 1986. The Subaru Impreza Group, a wholly owned subsidiary of Fuyo Bank, Ltd. (the Group Investment Ltd.), signed a contract in 2011 with Fuyo Bank to establish it.

to produce Subaru vehicles in Malaysia for marketing and distribution in Malaysia, Thailand and Indonesia. There are an estimated 100,000 Subaru vehicles in the Philippines, where cars are left-hand-drive, an imported CBU from Japan, according to Lopez. Maybe that's why Subaru cars are in the Philippines franchise Japanese brands.

In the Manila leg qualifier of the Challenge, the rules and regulations of the Regional Final Off apply. Participants cannot use complex, but, rather, simple, vehicles to change clothes or footwear (they are given a white, cotton T-shirt and shoes to wear). They can use only their right palm and are not allowed to sit, drink or eat during the Challenge, although they are given a 5-minute break every 45 hours during which they can use the toilet, eat, or drink or get a change. Comments who host the rules will be disqualified after their earnings.

When I arrived at the BGC venue of the Challenge last afternoon last August, day 29 of the 14 participants were still standing. There were no more left, Lopez told me that one girl failed to show up, when the car was leaving her, and was ruled out, the challenge that was parked nearby.

It started for a while, then ended hard, but the contestants' enthusiasm hung on with their right palm placed on the car. A second round of the Central Challenge was underway (as pointed to narrow down the field). While each contestant kept his right palm on a spec-

Why it's easy to raise a brat

It happens little by little, as parents and caregivers spoil their wards in a number of ways

Andrey Tan-Zucker

MAMA DIARIES

THERE IS nothing like a screaming, writhing child in a store to grab the attention of every passer-by. Sometimes, the reason for the crying could be valid, like a head bashed against a corner. However, there are times when it is when it is: A child who has been given too much, without limits and boundaries. The dreaded specter is here—spoiled brat syndrome.

As time to raise our children goes up like the little angels we find they are, but sometimes we end up with holy innocents instead. Every parent wants to give his child the best, but how do you give the best without giving them the best and giving them too much?

Though it may come as a complete surprise to parents when their children turn from Dr. Medica Mr. Hyde, the transformation doesn't happen overnight. It happens little by little, as parents and the joys spoil their wards in a number of ways.

It's not hard to create a bratzilla. It's actually pretty easy, and it starts with...
 1. Secunderary......like there is a lot of rules on paper for kids and sometimes, we actually get to enforce them successfully. But there are times when it is just easier to say "Yes," to the demands that the little ones make. Just according to Betty Brown, a child development specialist, "one random 'yes' leads a child through a thousand 'yes'."

That not that you are permissive to a new toy, as an attempt to quell your child's tantrums, with individualized rules to set for the same thing over and over again.

Yes also applies to parents who are not on the same page. When you're the whole world giving her back down and saying "no," but if dad comes home and says, "Yes," it's a headache in everything, because of the past week could all just go wrong.

Making up for absence and guilt

How to introduce Robredo, the public servant, to your kids

By Noel Dela-Romana Cruz
Contributor

This illustrated biography, part of the "Great Men and Women of Asia" series, is recounted as an Internet chat between two friends to appeal to young readers

CONTEMPORARY PHILIPPINE history starts August as the month of deaths of individuals highly admired like Cory Aquino (Aug. 1), Cory Aquino's brother-in-law, Antonio (Aug. 21), 90 top Aquino (Aug. 31), and the most recent, P-Noy's former Secretary Jesse Robredo (Aug. 10). These dates should give greater extension and meaning to the annual holiday at the end of the month, National Heroes Day.

The extensive media coverage last of the extraordinary public servant Jesse Robredo, and drew such public interest and curiosity because of the honorable and dramatic circumstances of his passing, including the grace, serenity and courage of his wife Liza and their daughter.

Popular, the Great Men and Women of Asia—Children's Series includes an illustrated Jesse Robredo biography for young readers, by virtue of his having been a Ramon Magsaysay Awardee for Government Service in 2000.

Robredo's accomplishments as big industry mayor of Naga are documented in a manner that children will relate to, through a series of Internet chats between two young boys, simply illustrated by XOXOX, coming from the UK, and Maribeth-Gomez, a half-Puerto Rican vacation in his parents' hometown.

Naga City where he is completing his third term.

What kind of vacation is this, he says, when all we do is attend any personal business with all their friends, and I have to take jobs I am serving for the first time?

"THE PUBLIC'S Servant" (with illustrations by XOXOX)

It is such a funny story, Maribeth says, that he even wonders if it has any lessons at all. He is surprised that it does, making possible the conversation with Maribeth to read the book was for the days of boredom in his school.

It turns out to be quite an unusual vacation, for Maribeth's amusement, but he has met the city mayor teach his immediate friend to read, how that even happened. Was his friend of any importance for the mayor in his with him?

As their words were details about the mayor, while in a town and about "don't mind" words... but interesting! something enough for Maribeth to tell for the mayor's biography. Why would? He was playing basketball in the street instead of doing "merry work" and did not have his parents disciplining him all the time.

Biking around the city

As unlike in America where guns, club phones and walks without would be standard here, for security, small things like, so the Naga citizens call him, like taking around the city—why does he not carry one?

More anecdotes are included, revealing the girl and the character of her father, Mayor Robredo. When he talked about the incidents on television in search of a little girl who had run away from home, the mayor worked. Was it an election promise that he would be all that trouble? That was easily dismissed, because it was his last year in office and could not run again as mayor.

Otherwise, Maribeth's birthday visit coincides with a typhoon, with Naga as the hardest hit, the storm in 12 years. Call it the highlight of 18 days of boredom. It was a familiar scenario, with many houses under water and accidents resulting in the rescue. Maribeth's cousin was part of the patch rescue team that Robredo had organized previously for such cases.

The story to tell all sorts of ways that the storming after the storm, Robredo was seen at the rescue place with a big basket bringing help to the victims. While he was looking to see very long more, many of the Naga citizens did the same in the days outside their homes.

This book biography is merely a nice introduction to this public servant, but enough to pique curiosity. Thus, it is helpful that this book and the others in the series of biographies available and the Modern Filipino Biographies includes a more detailed biographical account in the inside back cover, with the story itself focusing on specific incidents in the hero's life. It is such a human interest incident that are woven together to highlight the distinct qualities of heroism and greatness.

The format of the biography, as easy to interest that style, should make it readable and has beautiful reading, especially for elementary readers. The use of vibrant and all-around things and the best exaggerated expressions are other appealing features. The conversation is punctuated with "Gosh," the trip to Naga described as "wonder," with Maribeth's such as referring to the homecoming to his country of birth as one that would "build character." What initially appeared to be a trip "that was so not a vacation" emerged as one that truly built character, because of the mayor's meeting with a real life hero.

There's a right way to tutor children

WORK AROUND has difficulty completing its academic tasks, parents usually turn to a tutor, who then just over the current lesson with the child, answers questions, and reviews for upcoming tests.

At Tutoring Club, that's not the way things work.

Setting into the habit of helping a child rather than identifying weaknesses and strengthening learning skills will not help a child. Tutoring club does not subscribe to the traditional approach of addressing academic tasks.

Instead, it believes in building and strengthening the learning foundation, applied skills and learned competencies from basic to advanced levels across academic areas.

At Tutoring Club, the goal is not only to have each child perform according to academic norms, but also to equip them.

After 30 hours of tutoring, a child's skill in a specific academic field is guaranteed to improve at least one full grade level.

Tutoring club was founded in 1981 in the US by entrepreneur Larry Schwartz, a pioneer of the children's tutoring services industry. The first Philippines branch opened in 2007.

Manners at the movies

The cinema is a great place to see how people really behave; many act as if there is no one else around

JUST THE basics, folks. Imagine watching a movie, and seated beside you is someone who's texting every 10 minutes. It is the most annoying movie experience one can have.

Even if the movie phone is silent, its incessant flashes of light are extremely bothersome. Maybe texting won't bother me, more than that, someone you're not being considerate of others. That's not to say that basic consideration of those around you.

We're the modern culture you see a mix of different personalities, and you don't even have to speak to them, not like at a party. It's when you see how people behave, and some people act as if there is no one else in the movie theater except them.

For instance, the food people bring in. Again, popcorn, nachos, chips and a drink are standard movie fare, with the occasional candy bar or gourmet treat. What do they have in common? None of them smells. Oh yes, in several popcorn smells, too it smells nice.

A burger loaded with onions or fried chicken or even pizza does not smell anywhere near good. It can be disgusting. As well from cell phone rings (inside the movie theater, please observe loud electronic music that smells as well).

Getting out of the theater is another thing altogether. Please allow the people in front of you to get ahead of you in moving out of their seats in the aisle. If there is space, you can move forward. You might ask, "Shouldn't they get up?" Believe it or not, finding someone everywhere, even in a crowded high-end theater.

Holding hands. When holding and cuddling, although I am nothing wrong with couples holding hands during their scene around each other while watching a movie, I would advise that it be left at that. Anything beyond that makes those around you completely uncomfortable.

As a cartoon or a family movie, it is acceptable to hear children's laughter or groups of excitement. But in a movie that is neither a cartoon or a family movie, children have no place. I've seen families bring small children to action films, and more serious films where they wiggle, whine and cry.

Please don't kick the chair in front of you. I suffer each time each time I watch a movie. When you kick the chair behind of you, it bothers the person seated on it. I once looked back at the woman seated behind me, and she still did not get it. If someone was kicking your seat from behind, you would get annoyed, too.

Lastly, this is a true story and I am even embarrassed to write it. One movie you show in the movie theater. How did I know someone removed into those doors in where I was seated? The smell.

Next time you go and enjoy a movie, kindly be considerate to those around you so that they, too, can enjoy the movie. With the DVD? Well, first one, but sometimes it is more enjoyable to watch a movie on the big screen.

MODERN MANNERS

by Lisa S. Bernando

Goodbye, 180-pound me! Hello, new life!

You can say my outlook has changed for the better when my body started to change.

Growing up, I had what they call "fat genes." But I never let my weight hinder me from all the activities—not even when I weighed my heaviest at 230 kilos. So like every other person, I went to the gym. It was 2.5 years of actively working out that I got my weight down to a nice 154 lbs.

My heaviest at 280 lbs. — NEVER AGAIN!

And then it plateaued. I thought that was the end of my weight-loss journey. And all I looked like was an average gym-goer. There was no waist, no sexiness, nothing. I had to do something different. Something that can also fit in my work schedule.

So I tried another route, this time non-invasive treatments. I heard about the Marie France Pro-Plus program. They promised that if you don't lose your agreed weight in 100 days, you get your money back. And that was all a skeptic like me needed to hear.

On my 2nd month, I had lost 29.4 lbs. Nine, I've lost a total of 30.6 lbs. My gay friend told me, "Shiela, ang ganda ng pagpapayat mo. Hindi haggard!" I was just giddy with excitement. Today, I'm still doing my program because I feel closer to my target weight of 125 lbs.

So, dear readers, if you think the body you have now is the absolute smallest it can be, take a chance at Marie France and she'll surprise you. Call 894-2639 and maybe you'll get to write your own weight-loss story too.

Best of luck!

It's an old repeated story, how she found painting to be youth but got sidetracked to careers in other fields.

"The creative side is my focus on music," she said. Now at an age where she doesn't want to be retired, she taught herself how to paint, and is learning the business of selling her art.

On how the art affects other painting, she quoted the words of the Buddha, about the master who goes to his own servants but not to his own (others) according to their

The actress says she and Chiz are "not officially together"

By Maricel R. Cruz

ALICE (son, son, son) "Chiz" (son, son, son) Miriam Dela Cruz-Santiago has introduced Heart Evangelista to other eligible bachelors.

"She made me go out with Chiz," Evangelista told the actress during the press launch of the drama series "Love Me, Love Myself" on GMA 7. Evangelista further revealed, "She even has a list of people whom she thinks I should know. She said, 'Take your time with this one. Tell me when you think you're ready. If you don't like Chiz, then we'll try another.'"

She, however, refused to disclose the names of the other people on Santiago's dating list for fear that it would cause problems and heartaches.

She disclosed details of how the lady actress arranged her dates with Sonnet Dizon-Santiago remains herself the actress "santiago's son."

Evangelista revealed, "One time, she even asked me, 'When do you want to see this man?' This is not because she hoped for this to be my boyfriend."
